Trans_ıt.

E_hotel Interior Urbanism

Bussiness tourism node for the information, communication and entertainment (ice) industries.

This project wants to propose a contemporary solution for a material envelope to accommodate the activities of a person in Trans_it.

The theme of Trans_it emerged from the analysis of the e-Hotel brief, which posed questions on, among other things, 'potentially new configurations implied by the emergence of the new typologies of the complex merging of physical space and interactive web space' or also on 'new spatialities that might rise from the temporal structures of business tourism'.

An investigation of the www and its devices on the one hand and the organizational and behavioural patterns of travel(lers) on the other hand, and the findings from work-shops and seminars throughout phase 1, directed the interest of the team very much into the topics of networks and horizontal hierar-chies. A structural workshop on geodetic principles and a furniture workshop on nomadic furniture pro-vided the initial tools to investigate those topics in a spatial context.

We are especially interested in exploring and imagining spatial answers to contemporary political, technological, economical and so-cial conditions. Having taken up the nomad (whose existential conditi-ons such as multi-culturalism and migrating behaviour are the ele-ments of today's subjectivity) as its user-group, the project is a search for a questioning and transforming of programmatic typologies such as the hotel, the 'home', the shopping mall, the meeting place, the infra-structural hub, ... This exploration is not to be understood as a mere formal pro-cess, the examination of relation-ships of form to operativity is a big concern and at the heart of the design strategy. Finally, dyna-mic processes and the evolution of use in space and time determine the agenda of the project.
